COUNTY COURT.

After the opening of the county court by Judge Street this morning, an argument arose as to trial of questions of fact—Judge Herring and Marl Smith advocating the system of set terms. Judge Robinson ably, and with much success, satisfied the court that it was not within its power to do this.

THE TOMBSTONE is of the opinion that the county court was established for the purpose of obtaining speedy trials, as in fact, the bill is mandatory in its provisions that the court shall be open every day in the year (holidays and non-judicial days alone excepted). We think that Judge Street will not, by any action on his part, seek to thwart the purpose for which his court was created. The proposition advocated by Judge Herring, that four appointments be made for jury trials each year, simply sets aside the principal object for which the court was created, and we trust it will not meet the approval of our worthy judge. The county court was established for the convenience of the people, and they will expect speedy and impartial trials therefrom.

GENERAL SHERIDAN has received several photographs from Fort Bayard, New Mexico, representing two troops of the Sixth cavalry firing over the bodies of their horses, which lie flat on the ground. They are very interesting, in that they show to what extent the horses of the cavalry branch of the service can be trained. In a letter accompanying the photographs, Major Arnold, stationed at that post, states that the four troops under his command, averaging about thirty-five horses each, each troop has about twenty-five horses broken to lie still while firing over them, most of them going down by merely taking hold of the left leg. This is the result of about three months' work, one hour a day, barring Sundays. Considering that the horses are California broncos, generally aged, their thorough training is all the more remarkable. Major Arnold is confident that a much better result may be obtained from young American horses. One of the great results obtained, Major Arnold says, is that the men who were trained have become courageous and confident in handling and riding their horses, thus increasing their proficiency as cavalrymen beyond expectation. Horses which were considered dangerous formerly now are gentle. When down they allow the men to climb over them, creep between their legs and fondle them as if they were their greatest friends. Army officers have become very much interested in the matter, and it is not improbable that more extensive experiments will be made in this direction. The value of a large body of men mounted on animals that will lie down at a touch and suffer guns to be fired over their bodies in action, is apparent.—[Army and Navy Journal.]

There is an impression among the citizens, and the firemen in particular, that the new city charter does away with the salary of the chief of the fire department, and also of the stewards of the company. We have made inquiries to-day from members of the legal profession, and they, one and all, say the new charter will in no way effect the offices mentioned.

General Grant.

New York, April 2.

The Tribune says: Dr. Shady said after midnight: "Dr. Douglass called for me about 1:30 o'clock this morning, when on the way to General Grant's, where he had been summoned by a messenger a short time before. I dressed hastily, and in a few moments we were driven rapidly to the house of the general. Upon arriving there we found the family up, and that alarming symptoms had developed soon after Dr. Douglass had left the patient, a few hours before. There was no indication after the general had gone to bed and Dr. Douglass had started for home that there would be any change for the worse within a short period. At 2 a. m., when we saw the general, he was much distressed. While he was dozing there had been an accumulation of phlegm in the rear nasal passage, and he was awakened by a sense of suffocation and difficulty of breathing. The patient became apprehensive at the sudden development of the new symptoms that were attended with a prospect of serious results, and wanted an explanation of the trouble. He consequently desired the presence of his physician and we were sent for. We immediately made an examination of the throat and found the palate considerably swollen and the throat inflamed and congested more than usual. The anodyne he took before going to bed was given in divided doses, but in consequence of existing irritating substances in the throat, as well as the distress caused by the inflammation, the anodyne failed to have its proper effect and he was unable to sleep."

Dr. Douglass remained with the general all night, in accordance with the patient's wish, and before the general went to bed his throat was treated with anodyne. The prospects were at last accounts that the general would have a good night's rest and his condition would be much improved. Harrison, the general's servant, told a member of the household in the afternoon that when the general struggled out of bed he said to him, in a matter-of-fact way: "I can't stand this, Harrison. I am going to die."

Religious Trouble in Uruguay.

BUENOS AYRES, April 2.

A rupture between the Uruguay government and the vatican is imminent, owing to the government for the arrest of priests who preach against the government's attitude in regard to civil marriage. The bishop declared he could not accept the judgment of police officers as to what sermons would come under the ban of the law and merit punishment by imprisonment, and he has consequently directed the priests not to preach in any church upon any subject. The bishop has also asked M. L. Matera, apostolic delegate resident in this city, to intervene.

Troops Wanted.

MONTREAL, April 2.

It is stated by a government official who came here from Ottawa that a cable message had been received from Lord Wolseley by Lord Lauderdown, asking if he could get one or two regiments from Canada for service in the Sudan.

Aspinwall Destroyed.

WASHINGTON, April 2.

The following dispatch from Commander Kane, of the Galena, has just been received by the secretary of the navy: "Aspinwall is in ashes, burnt by the insurgents to prevent capture by the government troops. The Pacific mail dock and railroad property, at the north end of the island, and the canal property at Crispal are the only buildings saved. The shipping is safe. I have all my force on shore protecting property. My ship is crowded with refugees, and thousands are destitute and without shelter."

The Egyptian Convention.

LONDON, April 2.

The recent meetings of Musurus Pasha, Hassan Fehmi Pasha and Earl Granville were in connection with the Egyptian financial convention. The Turkish government was reluctant to sign the convention, thinking that it implied a recognition of the bombardment of Alexandria and England's subsequent actions in Egypt, which was considered as opposed to the Sultan's suzerain rights and likely to produce a bad impression on the Mussulmans. It is reported that Granville threatened to give Musurus and Fehmi their passports and break off diplomatic relations with Turkey unless the Sultan signed a firman for a loan of 90,000,000 pounds sterling. The Sultan, it is said, consented, and issued the firman, still refusing, however, to sign the convention, but he afterwards called the Council of Notables and finally decided to sign the convention with certain reservations which Granville accepted.

A Dark Face at the Window.

CLEVELAND, April 2.

For several nights past the family of W. Hoyt have been annoyed by a man looking in at the windows. About 8 o'clock this evening Mrs. Hoyt noticed a face at the window. Mr. Hoyt went outside, revolver in hand, and seeing a man in the yard commanded him to throw up his hands. The stranger reached for his hip pocket and Hoyt fired, shooting him through the heart. The dead man is a mulatto, whose identity it is impossible to ascertain. Hoyt gave himself up to the police. He is a stenographer, in the employ of the Standard Oil Company.
